Revolution Canning Industry Very Active

Pressure Canner Available To Those Who Wish To Can From Their Gardens

Seventy-six quarts of fresh fruits and vegetables were canned in the Revolution welfare department kitchen last week.

The State Department of Agriculture bulletins on "Canning" were followed, and we have some perfect quarts of food. We hope to have an exhibit of our village canning in the fall, so we hope that all who can will can this year.

Those who canned last week using the pressure canner were:

Mrs. Luke Irvin, 8 qts. string beans; 2 qts. lima beans.

Mrs. R. A. Hughes, 6 1/2 qts. lima beans.

Mrs. Ernest Leonard, 7 1/2 qts. lima beans.

Those using the hot water bath were:

Mrs. Mack Fulk, 20 qts. peaches.

Mrs. P. C. Laughlin, 16 qts. peaches.

Mrs. Floyd Davis, 16 qts. peaches.

Mrs. Zink will assist anyone who needs her while Mrs. Steele is on vacation. Call her at 8406 before 9:30 A.M. or at 21047 after 5:00 P.M.

Watch your gardens and gather your vegetables while they are young and tender. Let nothing go to waste!

Proximity Red Cross Dressings Room News

July was a record month for the Proximity Red Cross surgical dressings room when they made a total of 6,134 dressings. From the looks of things the Thursday night group will surpass the Monday night workers during August.

Last Thursday night the following workers made 650 dressings: Mesdames J. T. Carruthers, A. B. Caudle, R. C. Goforth, Jay Suttles, Archie Williams, Misses Millicent Maness, Mary Goforth, Dolly Ozell, Mary Goforth, Dan and Grace McDowell.

On Monday night the following workers made 809 dressings: Mesdames C. S. Becker, J. T. Carruthers, Lawrence Forrester, A. B. Caudle, R. C. Goforth, C. F. Noah, R. F. Thigpen, Al Glew, Harry Austin, Frank Boone, Gustav Ziprik, H. B. Ritter, Hattie Brame and Misses Dolly Goforth, Juanita Hardy, Mary Goforth, Millicent Maness, Juanita Johnson, Frances Holman and Phoebe Richards.

Special Announcement

The Loyal Wesley class of Carraway Memorial Methodist church will hold its regular monthly meeting, Tuesday evening, August 8, at 7:00 o'clock, on the lawn near the church. Following the business meeting, the class will enjoy a watermelon feast served by the following hostesses: Mesdames A. M. Whit, T. M. Leonard, T. L. Gregory, Maude Hicks, J. H. Harder, Luther Clark, Robert Squires and Miss Pearl Wyche.

White Oak Surgical Class To Have Picnic

All members of White Oak surgical class are invited to a picnic at Greensboro Country Park, Friday P.M., August 11, at 5:00. Every one is asked to bring a lunch and bathing suit and meet at White Oak welfare building. Please let Miss Tilly know if you have transportation.

Proximity News

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Sims have returned to their home in Mount Airy after a visit with Mrs. R. E. Sims and Mr. and Mrs. Ike Sadler.

Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Gilham of Stone Mountain, Ga., spent several days last week with Mrs. R. E. Sims.

"LOOK, DEAR, THE JONERS ARE REFLECTING THEIR VICTORY BANNER—HERE ARE THOSE PEASANTS AGAIN!"

Battle Enemy Together

A HANDSOME GUERRILLA GIRL fighter of famed Marshal Tito's armies, clad in battledress, stands beside a strapping comrade on an airfield strip carved out among the rocky hills of an island off the Yugoslav coast. Behind them, R.A.F. mechanics are working on one of the British Spitfire fighters which has been giving these partisan forces close air support in their campaign against the Nazis.

White Oak Surgical Dressings Class News

Thursday night, July 27, twenty-two women made 720 dressings at the White Oak surgical dressings class. During the month of July, 14 workers gave 58 hours and made a total of 2056 dressings, which was far short of the quota of 5000.

Nine young ladies from Stevens Memorial Baptist church came for the first time and gave a total of 9 hours.

Those working Thursday night, July 27, were as follows: Mesdames M. Leonard, L. C. Harris, Frank Clark, Alma Dudding, Owen Parker, Ogburn Bennett, Colon Powers, L. M. Hutchinson, Lee Clapp, Garland Flintom, Jack Caudle, Neil Armstrong, Dan Currie, Walter Huffines and Misses Louise Hester, Betty Paris, Betty Price, Ivey Sutton, Thelma Taylor, Bessie Cuthbertson, Louise Campbell and Libby Brisson.

Revolution Red Cross Dressing Class News

One thousand, two hundred and twenty-six dressings were made in the Revolution surgical dressing room, Monday night, July 31.

We are very proud of our record for the past three Monday nights. We have gone far over 1000 dressings each night.

No matter how hot the weather, we made a new record for July. Forty-two workers spent 199 1/2 hours and made 6,432 dressings. We should be, and are, very proud of what we are doing to help our wounded boys.

REWARD IF FOUND

Lost—A Tan Gabardine Coat with a changeable silk lining, with a Marshall Field label inside. If found and returned to Mrs. Sula Brown, telephone 5502, the finder will receive a liberal reward.

Poppin in Soup

A few grains of buttered popcorn tossed on the soup just before serving will do wonders for flavor and looks, too.

WHITE OAK LOCAL NEWS

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Wilkerson Jr., of Fayetteville, visited Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Bell, Sunday.

Charles Thomas Culbreth, S. 1c of Washington, D. C., returned Monday night after spending several days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Culbreth, Maple street.

Mrs. Lamar Maxwell returned Saturday after spending a week at Carolina Beach.

Mr. Frank Dixon, Poplar street, is a patient at Wesley Long hospital.

Mrs. W. T. Moore, 11th street, is a patient at St. Leo's hospital, where she underwent a major operation.

Alton Rhew, Machinist Mate 2c, arrived Tuesday to spend thirty days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Rhew, Gordon street.

Mrs. H. A. McDams, is spending several weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Wilson on Maple street.

QUOTES OF THE WEEK

"It doesn't matter, because my barber never cuts my hair short enough anyway."—A. Hitler, reporting that would-be assassin's bomb only singed him.

"They missed the old boomer—but there's time yet."—Winston Churchill, the same occasion.

"Only as the American economy profits can the individual profit. If we can succeed in making a bigger pie, each one will get a bigger slice."—Walter D. Fuller, pres. Curtis Publishing Co.

"Incentive, not compulsion, is the mainspring of our economy—incentive for all groups to work together as well as for individual interests to compete."—John L. Collier, pres., B. F. Goodrich Co.

"Opportunity will mean more to our returning veterans than any bonus."—Gov. Edward Martin of Pa.

Don Herold Says:

10,000 Men On A Vacant Lot Imagine 10,000 men on a vacant lot. They have met to start a business and make 10,000 jobs for themselves.

One of them estimates it will take about $10,000 to provide the factory roof, machines, tools and materials to put each man to work, average. That means they need a total of 100 million dollars. Gosh, they haven't got it! This shows labor's need of "capital".

So they start to look for some people from whom they can "rent" 100 million dollars. These are people who have had the talent to save more than they spend. Maybe it will take 10,000 of them to chip in and risk the 100 million dollars.

The rent (dividends) these savers get may be somewhere between about $2 to $7 per $100 per year. "So what?" say the workers. They need help.

Then the 10,000 workers find their business needs skilled managers. These are scarce and they get big salaries (before taxes). "So what?"

This turns the usual picture of "capital and labor" inside out, but maybe it makes it plainer.

China's First Blood Bank Organized In This Country Is Now In Use

China's first blood bank, organized and staffed in this country with the aid of money contributed to United China Relief through the Greensboro Community and War Chest, arrived in China just as the present heavy operations were beginning in the China-Burma theatre, and is already supplying life-giving plasma for Chinese casualties, according to Dr. Ruth Y. Schiffman, executive director of the chest.

Details concerning the bank were received by Dr. Schiffman from the American Bureau for Medical Aid to China, sponsor of the project and a participating agency of United China Relief.

In a message to the Bureau, Col. George E. Armstrong, U.S.A. Medical Corps, said, "We have been looking forward to the arrival of the blood bank and fortunately its coming coincided with the outbreak of more active operations. The plasma which arrived with the unit was immediately placed at the disposal of combat troops. Market interest was shown by various Chinese organizations, both military and civilian, but when blood donors were asked for, but ten appeared. It was soon obvious that the reason for this small number of donors was Confucius' teaching that one's body is derived from the parents and filial devotion forbids damaging it in any way."

First-hand evidence of the life-saving qualities of plasma convinced the Chinese, however, that it is permissible to donate blood for such a cause, and already more than 20,000 soldiers, students and other civilians have registered as donors, Col. Armstrong stated.

Both the bank and its American-trained technicians were flown to China after special priorities were granted at the urgent request of Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, it was disclosed.

Pointing out that contributions made by residents of Greensboro through the Community and War Chest help finance this activity of United China Relief, Dr. Schiffman said: "Aid to China serves not only a humanitarian purpose; it becomes a matter of vital military necessity now that our own fighting forces are actively beating back the Japs in the Pacific and the Far East."

Prox. Baby Clinic

The following members of the Proximity Baby Clinic were present on Wednesday afternoon: Robert Leon Maness, Homer Franklin Mounce Jr., Sylvia Karen Williams, Deanna Kay Johnson, William Howard Robertson Jr., Roberta Maness, Michael Strickland, Patricia Ann Stanley, Richard Frank, Mary and George Curtis.

Were You There?

American lives will be sacrificed needlessly, said General Brehon Somervell in a recent statement. Reason given: shortages in a number of critical products used by the armed forces. One of these critical products is Cotton Textiles. Why is there a shortage in cotton textiles? Because certain workers are staying off the job. (Those actually sick are justified in being out.)

Are you doing your share to produce the necessary war materials? Look over these attendance figures and think over the past several weeks. If someone you love is in the war, your being on the job may save his life. If you don't believe that, read General Somervell's statement.

During the week of July 17 to 23, White Oak mill's attendance record improved while all the other three mills declined. Those boys on White Oak

Cone Y. Membership Pauses In Silent Tribute To Fallen Comrades During War

Pvt. Ervin C. Whitt Killed In Action In Italy

Was Son Of Mr. And Mrs. Alfred E. Whitt; Former Employee Of White Oak

Word has been received here recently of the death of Pvt. Ervin C. Whitt, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred E. Whitt, of 1101 Sixteenth street, White Oak. Pvt. Whitt was killed in action in Italy, July 13th.

A former employee of White Oak mills, Pvt. Whitt entered the service September 27, 1943, and received his training at Camp Wheeler, Ga. He was sent to North Africa last March, and later was sent to Italy.

He is survived by his parents, one brother, Pvt. James Melvin Whitt, of the army air forces, Sheppard Field, Texas; two sisters, Misses Thelma and Janice Whitt, of the home, and his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Gregory of Greensboro.

G.I. Duds A Boon To Hot Civilians

Looking to the American doughboy as the No. 1 fashion plate of the year, the clothing industry is un-shackling the suffering male by bestowing on him, for next summer, a new "shirt-suit."

With men like Dr. Victor Heiser of the National Association of Manufacturers, who advocated "no jackets rules" in offices, championing the cause, and with 10,000,000 G.I.'s accustomed to going coarser in the summer, the whole thing is in the bag.

Henry L. Jackson, men's wear fashion counsel, and counsel to the Army Quartermaster Corps, told the International Association of Clothing Manufacturers in New York recently that the shirt-suits could be developed in tropical worsteds and other fine materials. We might even have "two-shirt" suits he said.

Advance preparation saves time for dishes that require long cooking, but meat, milk, or egg dishes prepared in advance must be refrigerated to prevent spoilage.

Nine Former Members Of Local Y's Have Given Their Lives For The Cause Of Winning This War And Helping To Preserve Peace

The Cone Memorial Young Men's Christian Association has more than five hundred active members enrolled in the armed services of our country and fighting on many battle fronts of this global war today. With the encouraging news of our allied forces advancing toward their ultimate goals of victory, there comes a message that gives us pain and anxiety as we note the list of men who have been killed or missing in action.

W. O. Baby Clinic

Those present at the Clinic Wednesday, August 2, were: Jane Hill, Richard and Beulah Mae Johnson, Terry and Neal Blum, Jimmie Oldham, Harold Harris, Bennie Watson, Elfred Cofer, Babe Barley, Paul Childress Jr., Brenda Faye Simmons, Richard Pridemore, Iris and Joe V. Hill, Larry Spivey, Dennis Robinson and Franklin and Ann Myrick.

Dr. Keith will be in attendance next Wednesday at 1:15. Please be on time if you wish to see him.

Meat Stews Attractive

The attractiveness of a meat stew depends not only upon cooking the meat and vegetables properly, but also upon the way it is served. This, too, is another way of getting variety into the meal. Meat and vegetables may be arranged on a platter with some thought to color and design. The appearance may be improved by cooking peas or green beans separately and using them to garnish the white vegetables. Chopped parsley or watercress may be used as garnish. For another variation the stew may be cooked in casserole with dumplings or biscuits on top.

We are mindful of the vacancy left in the homes and hearts of parents, wives and sweethearts and by the same token there is a vacant place at the Young Men's Christian Association where they live in sacred memory among their many friends and comrades.

The Bivouac Of The Dead
The muffled drum's sad roll has beat.
The soldiers last tattoo:
No more on life's parade shall meet.
The brave and fallen few.
On faith's eternal camping ground.
Their silent tents are spread;
And glory guards the solemn round.
The bivouac of the dead.

Rest on, embalm'd and sainted dead,
Dear as the blood ye gave:
No impious footsteps here shall tread.
The heritage of your grave:
Nor shall your story be forgot.
While fame her records keeps;
On honor points the hallowed spot,
Where Valor proudly sleeps.

You marble minstrel's voiceless stone,
In deathless song shall tell:
When many a vanished age hath flown,
The story how ye fell.
Nor time's remorseless doom,
Shall dim on ray of glory's light,
That guards your deathless tomb.

Salad Bowl Supper

A hearty salad served in individual bowls is a satisfying summer supper, especially when served with finger sandwiches and carrot strips. Cup cakes and milk might be the easily prepared dessert.

Frankfurter Salad Bowl
1 1/2 cups sliced frankfurters
2 1/2 cups cooked kidney beans or 1 No. 2 can kidney beans
3/4 cup sliced sour pickles
3/4 cup French dressing
1 head lettuce
1/2 large sliced onion

Combine sliced frankfurters with drained kidney beans. Add sour pickles and 1/2 cup French dressing. Chill. Wash lettuce, separate leaves and break into pieces. Place alternate layers of frankfurters and bean mixture and lettuce and onion in a shallow salad bowl. Pour over this the remaining French dressing. Toss before serving in individual bowls. Serves 6.

Revolution Locals

Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Lineberry and son, Kenneth Jr., from Norfolk, Va., visited his mother on Spruce street.

Pfc. Edward Mendenhall, stationed at Camp Davis, is spending a twelve-day furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Mendenhall.

Joseph Davidson from the Navy, and his wife, from New York, spent a week with Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Johnson and other relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Roberson of Salisbury, and Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Allen, of Lexington, visited their brother and family, Mr. and Mrs. Ray-

Since Pearl Harbor, we have nine comrades that have fallen in battle, who were active in the membership of the YMCA during their boyhood and young manhood. We remember them today and pause in silent tribute to Howard Murray, J. O. Wheeler Jr., James Johnson, B. G. Yow Jr., Worth Reese, Clatus Whitt, James Henson, Ernest Smith, and Herbert McQueen. These young men grew up in the association and its activities of gymnasium classes, swimming groups, boys clubs, young men's activities and most of them spent many summers at Camp Herman.

Some of them were leaders of merit. Each carved a niche for himself in the sacred memory of the association of which we are proud. Many of them excelled in their respective fields of activity and thereby developed Christian character to live by and a fighting spirit plus the undaunted courage to die by.

May we on the home front resolve that we will give of our services more liberally to push the war effort to a sure and safe conclusion of victory and lasting peace for all mankind.

We are mindful of the vacancy left in the homes and hearts of parents, wives and sweethearts and by the same token there is a vacant place at the Young Men's Christian Association where they live in sacred memory among their many friends and comrades.

WHITE OAK
REVOLUTION

Greensboro, North Carolina, Friday, August 4, 1944

Yes I Did My Part

The European war is rapidly coming to a close. Even the most pessimistic admit that. Just how soon Germany will unconditionally surrender is a question no one can answer with any degree of certainty, but present guesses range anywhere from the middle of September to the end of the year. It is naturally hazardous for any one not familiar with various military details either in the Allied offensive or the German defensive to even attempt to make a guess. Furthermore, the time for the surrender will be effected by factors other than those purely military. The economic situation in Germany proper, as well as the morale on the home front, is not as easily determined as is the military strength of Germany on the battle field and behind the lines.

There is one thing certain, however, and that is, the war is not over yet. It is also true now, as in the past, that the end of the war can be made to come sooner by people on the home front sticking to their jobs and putting their best efforts forward.

There will be many adjustments which will be necessary when the hostilities in Europe cease. The problems will not be small, and it will require the best possible planning by individual industries, as well as by the nation as a whole, to make the adjustments with a minimum amount of hardship on the part of management and labor. During that period of adjustment it is of utmost importance that each group cooperate sympathetically with the other.

In paving the way for such cooperation during that transition period, it is equally important that groups now cooperate.

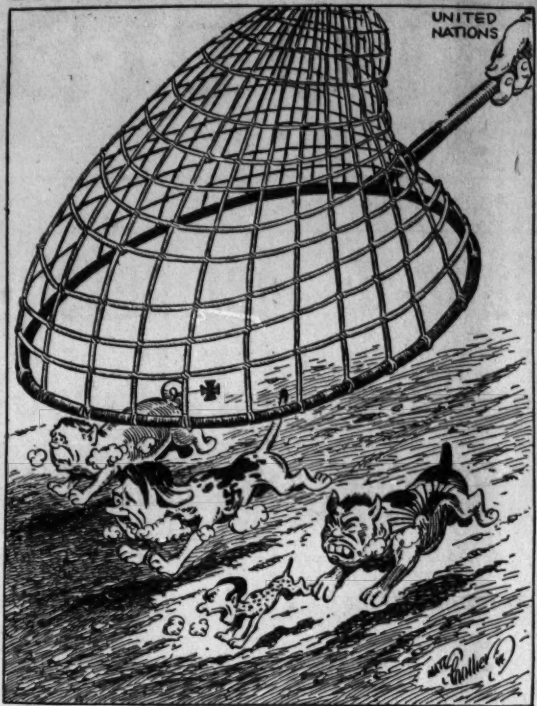

According to reliable information from authentic sources, such as the War Production Board, certain production is still badly needed in order to carry on this war. In fact, it is intimated that unless certain production is furnished, our military efforts will seriously suffer. The products of the mills made here in Greensboro, as well as in mills in other places, are among the supplies badly needed not only to help the military war effort but also to prevent extreme hardship on the home front. Herringbone, denims and flannels are among the textiles which are giving the War Production Board serious concern. In order to satisfy the actual needs, maximum production will have to be obtained. That means that those who have a part in the producing of these fabrics not only must be present at work each day possible, but also must efficiently produce while on the job.

Rather than permit the optimistic reports from the battlefields to cause us to become lax, we should realize that those reports mean that in order that favorable news continue to come we must redouble our efforts.

We would all like to feel that we are having a vital part in winning this war. Those who from now on regularly day in and day out produce to the very best of their ability will have had a vital part not only in winning the war but in bringing victory at an early date.

When this war is over and when the boys who do come back arrive again on the shores of their native land and heave that undecipherable sigh of relief and joy, be sure that each of you can look them square in the eye and pat them on the back and say, "Yes, I did my part back here to support you while you were doing your great part over there".

Ready-To-Eat Meal Platter Eye And Taste Appealing

With the fine variety of point-free ready-to-eat meats now available, nutritious porch meals may be quickly and easily prepared. Here are two menu possibilities.

Porch Picnic Menu No. 1
Platter of Ready-to-Eat Meats
Buttered Peas
Carrot and Cabbage Salad
Potato Salad
Hard Rolls
Fresh Berries and Jiffy Cake
Iced or Hot Drinks

Your platter of ready-to-eat meats may be a thing of beauty if you center it with the potato salad or garnish it with radish roses and pickles and sprigs of mint or parsley. Serve buttered peas as the hot dish.

Carrot-cabbage salad is given a new flavor by the addition of several slices of bacon crisply cooked and crumbled. This should be mixed at the last minute with the shredded cabbage and carrots and mayonnaise or cream dressing. Crunchy hard rolls are especially good with this menu.

Recipe for Jiffy Cake
4 tablespoons lard
1 cup sugar
1 egg
1/2 cup milk
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 cups sifted flour
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder

A SMILE OR TWO

There's been many good speeches made lately in favor of the farmers, but a half hour's rain would have done lots more good.

In a recent American advance a sergeant ordered an unbleached private to go into a dugout and clean out any Japs that happened to be there. The colored gentleman blanched a bit, swallowed his Adam's apple, and then said huskily: "All right, Sarge, but if you see three or four men come tearin' out ob dat hole, don't you shoot de fust one."

A tobacco-chewing mountaineer saw a sign "Women's Exchange" in a store window. He grinned and went in. "Can I help you?" queried the frozen-faced woman in charge. "Is this the Women's Exchange?" "Yes." "Are you the woman?"

ing in New York and Paris, sign theatrical productions for the Schuberts and Phil Harris. "It was exciting and fun," she says, "but not just exactly what I wanted to do. So I switched to fashion designing, and here I've been for eight years. And it's still the most stimulating and satisfying work I've ever done."

So expressive of the "will of the people" are her fashions that the Cotton-Textile Institute and National Cotton Council asked her to design the costumes for Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall, wife of the governor of Massachusetts, and her daughter, Susan, to wear in the series of portraits of First Ladies sponsored by the two organizations.

Miss Renke carried out the designs in a manner typical of her talent. Because she likes suits and believes them particularly well adapted to the American way of life, she created a scrupulously tailored one of checked seersucker for Mrs. Saltonstall. A fold of the fabric from shoulder seam to pocket flap outlines a yoke, gives a wide-shouldered effect to the jacket, and makes what might be just another tailored suit charming and different.

Susan's dress is cotton madras with multi-color border stripes around the hem and forming a yoke at the square neck in a frock that's neither too young nor too old and minimizes a tall girl's height.

Maine's First Lady Poses In Cotton

Made in historic Blaine House at Augusta, this photograph shows Mrs. Sumner Sewell, wife of the governor of Maine, and her daughter, Alexandra, wearing smart cottons designed especially for them by Dorothy Cox of McMullen. Mrs. Sewell wears a sunback dress of greenhouse madras with matching bolero and contrasting sash. Alexandra's dress, of the same plaid, is a variation of the "mother and daughter" theme. This is the seventeenth portrait in a series published by the Cotton-Textile Institute and National Cotton Council.

Home Luncheon Hot Sandwich Oh-So-Good

Much help has been given this year to the homemakers who pack lunches for their families to carry with them. But little attention has been given to the women who must prepare home luncheons for their families.

With schools in summer recess, ideas for home luncheons are sure to be welcome. Below is given one:

Broiled Open Sandwiches
Carrot Souffle
Relish Tray
Chocolate Cup Cakes Milk
Broiled Open Sandwiches
1 pound small sausage links
2 tablespoons water
1 cup unsweetened applesauce
8 slices buttered toast
8 thin strips American cheese.
Place sausage in cold frying-pan. Add water, cover and cook until water has evaporated. Remove cover, increase heat and cook until sausage is browned. Spread 2 tablespoons of applesauce on each slice of toast. Arrange 2 sausage links on each. Place American cheese strip across sausage. Broil slowly until cheese has melted. Makes 8 sandwiches.

Recipe Of The Month

Food rationing doesn't need to be frightening, but every homemaker must learn to make the most of the available food supply by careful selection and preparation for daily menus.

We often judge a man by the company he keeps, which sometimes flatters him.

New Private: I may like it after awhile; but just now I think there's too much drilling and fussing around between meals.

A member of a psych class on tour asked an inmate his name.
"George Washington," was the reply.

"But," said the perplexed lad, "last time we were here you were Abraham Lincoln."

"That," said the inmate sadly, "was by my first wife."

There's no single food that can take the place of meat, but it can be combined with other foods and have its flavor extended to them.

Sausage is so full of good flavor that it combines well with vegetables as well as the more bland foods. This sausage casserole comes from the recipe file of Jessie Alice Cline, home economist.

Sausage and Vegetable Casserole
1 pound sausage links
2 tablespoons water
1 onion, diced
1/2 green pepper, diced
6 pieces celery, diced
1 can tomato soup
1/2 cup catsup
2 1/2 cups cooked kidney or red beans.

Place sausage in cold frying-pan. Add water, cover and simmer until water evaporates. Remove cover, increase heat and brown sausage. Add onion, green pepper, celery, tomato soup and catsup. Cover and simmer slowly for 30 minutes. Add beans to cooked mixture and heat.

Wartime Cooking Problems

Meat Is Basis For Your Summer Meals

One thousand and ninety-five meals to be planned! It may sound like an overwhelming task, but many home-makers assume that responsibility every year, says Jessie Alice Cline, home economist. Food preferences vary from winter to summer and the foods available vary, too. So the meals for the Fourth of July are certain to be different from those of Christmas time, but day-to-day meals must be prepared with interesting variations, too.

Warm weather meal planning in particular must be done with care, for appetites may decline as temperatures soar. It is up to the homemaker to make summer meals especially tempting, says Miss Cline, for the family's food needs are as high, if not higher, at this time as during the winter months.

Since meat is a richer source of more of the essential nutrients than any other food, it is wise to begin all meal planning with the meat course.

One hot food is usually preferred even at summer meals. If the main course is hot, then the others may be cold. Hot meals for summer fall into natural classifications. Creamed meats: Chopped beef, ham, veal, etc. Braised meats: Pork and veal chops, pot-roast and Swiss steak. Panbroiled meats: Ham slices, lamb chops, steaks, liver, sweetbreads. Simmered meat: Corned beef, fresh and smoked tongue and other smoked meats. Roast meats: Beef, lamb, fresh pork, smoked pork, veal and broiled and panbroiled ready-cooked meats such as frankfurters, bologna, salami and cooked loaves.

When meats are served cold, hot soup, hot vegetables or hot breads are especially appetizing accompaniments. Sliced roast lamb and cold sliced tongue are a pleasing platter combination. Roast beef, roast pork and roast veal are delicious either alone or in combination, when sliced and served cold.

Cold sliced ready-to-eat meats are other aids to the perplexed menu planner. Jellyed meat loaves are summer staples, and, of course, the hearty cold meat salads have their place here, too.

Although two or three courses are usually sufficient for a summer meal, they may be varied. If an appetizer is desired, salad may be omitted, or if a fruit salad is served dessert may be omitted.

For this reason, Miss Cline makes suggestions for four courses to choose from, keeping in mind the meat that is to be served.

Appetizers: Melon, fruit cocktail, fruit juice, vegetable juice, seafood cocktail, canapés or assorted hors d'oeuvres; soup, hot or jellyed.

Salads: Jellyed vegetable or fruit salad, mixed vegetable or marinated cooked vegetable salad, cole slaw, potato salad, head lettuce, tossed green salad, avocado or fresh fruit salad.

2 tablespoons brown sugar
4 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup catsup
3 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1 cup water
Salt
Red pepper

Brown chopped onion in butter, add remaining ingredients and pour over lamb ribs.

Barbecued Ribs
3 pounds lamb ribs or spareribs
Salt and pepper
Barbecue sauce

Make lamb ribs by slicing between the ribs of a breast of lamb from which the breast bone has been removed. Brown the ribs or spareribs without adding extra fat. Season. Cover with the barbecue sauce and simmer gently or cook in a moderate oven (350 deg.F) for 1½ hours or until tender. Serves 6.

Barbecue Sauce
1 medium onion
2 tablespoons drippings
2 tablespoons vinegar

Hot accompaniments: Creamed, fried, boiled, scalloped, or baked potatoes or other vegetables.
Desserts: Fresh or stewed fruit, fruit pies, shortcakes, layer cakes, gelatin desserts, puddings, or frozen desserts.

Quick And Easy Meal Cookery Methods

Quick meals—easy meals—one-dish meals—these are topics which interest busy homemakers. A few suggestions by Jessie Alice Cline, home-economist include some recommendations for broiler meals.

Contrary to popular belief broiler meals can be quick, easy and "one-dish," says Miss Cline. They are quick, because the tender cuts of meat suitable for broiling are those which cook in a few minutes.

So long as the meat is broiled far enough away from the heat, this cookery method is easy also. There is no burning or spattering of fat and the meat needs to be turned only once.

The meat featuring broiled meat may be made "one-dish" by heating cooked vegetables, such as rice or hominy, in the bottom of the broiler pan while the meat is cooking. If there is room on the broiler rack next to the meat, bread may be toasted at the same time or halves of tomatoes may be broiled in this space.

An English grill is a hearty broiler meal that is very popular. Cooked vegetables may be heated in the bottom of the broiler pan in this case, too.

For each person to be served, provide one thick lamb chop, one lamb kidney, one slice of bacon and one thick slice of tomato. Put lamb chops on to broil first. When nicely browned and about half done, turn chops and add tomato slices sprinkled with bread crumbs, and kidneys which have been split. Put bacon on about five minutes before chops are done. Serve with baked potato.

Here is another broiler meal planned around ground beef:

Beef Patty Broiler Meal
1½ pounds ground beef
1½ teaspoons salt
¾ teaspoon pepper
¾ teaspoon macaroni
½ cup rye bread crumbs
2 tablespoons catsup
1 egg
1 cup milk
No. 2 can green beans or cooked left-over beans

An Gratin or creamed potatoes. Combine beef, seasonings, crumbs, catsup, egg and milk. Mix well and allow to stand for 2 hours. Arrange cooked green beans, either left-over or canned, in one-half of heated broiler pan with potatoes or a second cooked vegetable in other half. Place broiler rack over vegetables. Shape meat into large patties. Place on broiler rack. Arrange in broiler so that the top of the meat will be about 3 inches from the source of heat. Broil on one side until nicely browned, about 20 min. Turn and broil on second side, about 8 to 10 minutes. Serve immediately on hot plates.

Stuffed Pepper Surprise
Center For Meat Loaf

Here is a new idea in meat loaves from file of Jessie Alice Cline, home economist, meat loaf with rice-stuffed green peppers baked in the center. The peppers add a pleasing flavor to the meat, as well as a colorful center for each slice.

The ground meat called for in the recipe is lamb. However, if ground lamb is not available, ground beef may be used.

Green Pepper Ring Lamb Loaf
1½ pounds ground lamb
1½ cups bread crumbs
1 cup milk
3 tablespoons grated onion
1 cup cooked peas

Jellied Tongue New And Tasty Dish

A whole tongue in a gelatin mold makes an impressive meat dish which is easily prepared. A clear mold of this tasty meat combines well with many other foods.

Jellied Tongue
1 tongue, beef or veal
Water
1 large onion
1 tablespoon whole cloves
2 bay leaves
2 tablespoons gelatin

Wash tongue and cover with water. If it is fresh tongue, add 2 teaspoons salt. Add onion cloves and bay leaves. Cover and simmer until tender, allowing one hour to the pound. Remove the tongue from its hot cooking water and plunge it into cold water. This will make the skin easier to remove.

Drain off the cold water, split the skin and peel it off. Place tongue in mold. Strain the cooking liquid and dissolve gelatin in it. Bring to boiling point and pour over tongue. Allow to cool. This makes an attractive dish to slice at the table. A four-pound tongue will serve 12.

Quick Stew Saves Time
How to save time in the kitchen is long enough to do all the things that have to be done in a problem. When less time is spent in meal preparation, there is more time to do other things. Jessie Alice Cline, home economist, says that if left-over meat is in the refrigerator or ready-to-eat meat is available at the market, dinner can be ready in a jiffy, featuring a delicious stew.

Quick Stew
2 cups diced cooked or ready-to-eat meat
2 tablespoons drippings
2 tablespoons flour
1 can vegetable soup
Brown cooked meat in drippings. Add flour and a can of vegetable soup. Heat and serve on hot biscuits or potatoes.

Veal And Liver Sausage

An unusual combination of flavors is found in this fine dish, which uses liver sausage as a stuffing for veal rolls. Try it when you are looking for that elusive "something different" for family or company meals.

Veal-Liver Sausage Rolls
1½ pounds veal cutlets
½ pound liver sausage
1 egg
6 tablespoons milk
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 teaspoons chopped onion
¾ cup dry bread crumbs
¼ cup flour
3 tablespoons lard
Salt and pepper

Have veal slices cut ¼ inch thick. Remove fat and bone. Cut in 6 uniform pieces. Mash liver sausage and add egg, milk, parsley, onion and crumbs. Place on the pieces of veal. Roll and tie or fasten with skewers. Mix seasonings with flour and dredge the rolls. Brown in hot lard. Add 2 cups of water. Cover and simmer until tender or bake in a moderate oven (300deg.F.) for 1½ hours. Serve with gravy.

Uses for Rendered Fat

Fat rendered from pork or bacon can be successfully used as shortening in many quick breads and is particularly good in gingerbread, applesauce and spice cake.

Coldest Spot Belongs To The Fresh Meats

Points On Storing Different Kinds Of Meat At Home

Conservation of resources continues a major "must" on the home front and every patriotic housekeeper wants to take part in the campaign for reduction of food waste "from pasture and plow to the plate." Claude R. Wickard, U. S. Secretary of Agriculture, says "in this war meat is the great food weapon."

Storage of meat in the home is always a problem. Jessie Alice Cline, home economist, suggests these pointers to help prevent waste of this important protein and energy food, which also contributes needed vitamins.

Meat should go in the coldest spot in the refrigerator. It is not harmed by freezing; in fact, it will keep indefinitely if kept frozen. Meats should not be refrozen after thawing.

The smaller the portion of cut surface exposed on a piece of meat, the better it keeps. Meat in one large piece, like a roast, will keep in good condition in the refrigerator for a longer time than meat cut in small pieces for stewing. Ground meat, which has so much surface exposed, loses flavor and juiciness rapidly, and should be cooked as soon as possible after purchasing, or seasoned and prepared for cooking, then frozen.

Meat should be unwrapped as soon as it comes from the market. It may be wiped with a clean damp cloth before cooking (not before storing), never washed in water. It may be placed on a clean dry plate or shallow refrigerator dish and covered lightly or not at all. A piece of waxed paper laid over the meat is sufficient, or a loosely fitting refrigerator-dish cover may be used. Fresh meat should never be closely covered or tightly wrapped in paper because a little drying of the surface is desirable. If the meat is left wrapped in the paper as it came from the market cold penetration will be retarded and the paper may absorb juices from the meat.

Some variety meats, such as brains and sweetbreads, may be precooked before storing if they are not to be used at once. Precooking makes these meats keep longer.

Sliced bacon may be left in its original wrappings or wrapped in clean waxed paper, and should always be kept in the refrigerator. Only the amount to be used should be removed each time, for if the entire package is taken out and allowed to warm up, moisture will condense on the bacon and lessen its keeping qualities.

Cooked meat should be cut from the bone in as large pieces as possible and stored in the refrigerator, covered, to prevent drying. Because the surface has already been dried out by cooking no further drying is desirable and there may be not only loss of meat flavor but absorption of other flavors from things in the refrigerator, if cooked meat is left uncovered. It may be wrapped tightly in waxed paper or put in a close-covered refrigerator dish.

Ready-to-eat meats should have the slices piled together and wrapped as compactly as possible before storing.

HOW TO FREEZE PEACHES

The procedure for freezing peaches is quite simple, and, if directions are followed closely, results are highly satisfactory. Anyone owning a home freezing cabinet or renting space in a locker plant can have the thrill of serving peach shortcake that tastes like the real thing at any season of the year.

Here is Dr. Donald K. Tressler's recommended method for freezing peaches.

Take The Pick Of The Crop

Those varieties of freestone yellow peaches such as the J. H. Hale, having firm flesh and full flavor will produce the best frozen product.

Unlike canning, when it is desirable to preserve the fruit at a slightly immature stage, select peaches for freezing at the peak of maturity—when they are best for eating. But be careful they are not over-ripe.

Preparation

Do not allow fruit to stand for any length of time at room temperature. If it is impossible to prepare for freezing immediately, hold the fruit in electric refrigeration until such time as it can be frozen.

Wash the fruit, sorting out the over- and under-ripe peaches. Immerse them in boiling water for 2 minutes; plunge them in cold water and rub off peels; then keep the peaches in cold water until they can be sliced directly into the containers for freezing.

Packaging It is necessary to have liquid-tight containers. Heavily waxed cylindrical containers or lightly waxed cartons fitted with liquid-tight liners or bags which can be heat sealed are most satisfactory.

Prepare only one package for freezing at a time. Slice the peaches directly into the container, eliminating the dark or bruised spots and pits. Fill container only to within 3/4 in. of the top to allow for expansion of liquid during freezing. Cover with 60 percent or 70 percent sugar syrup (given below), then heat-seal package and label with china marking pencil indicating contents and date packed.

To heat-seal a package, the tip of a hot electric hand iron or curling iron is pressed over an apothecary's fold in the liners or bags inside rectangular cartons.

job recently in a country feed store. She had been warned the farmers thereabouts were great joshers and she was determined not to be taken in by them. The first morning a farmer came in and asked for some shorts for his pigs. The girl sweetly replied, "I'm sorry but we are out of shorts. How about some brassiers for your cows?"

A man entered a restaurant downtown the other day with his wife and six year old son. He ordered two beers. "Hey, pa," said the kid, "ain't Ma drinking?"

A young Brooklyn soldier was on maneuvers in Oregon. Having a few minutes to himself after evening chow, he strolled out into the woods and soon came back with a handful of rattlesnake rattles.

"Where in the world did you get them?" gasped his alarmed companion. "Off'n a womin," replied the lad from Brooklyn.

Husband (answering telephone): I don't know—call the weather bureau. Pretty Young Wife: Who was that? Husband: Some sailor, I guess. He asked if the coast was clear.

Headline: "Five cars leave the highways every minute." That's nothing to the number that will leave when new tires are available and we can really go again.

Heard in an English air raid shelter: "Is there a machintosh in here that's large enough to keep two young ladies warm?"

"No, but there's a MacPherson who's willing to try," was the reply from a dark corner.

A certain newspaper that makes a practice of answering inquiries from readers received this one: "Please tell me what is the matter with my chickens. They go to roost apparently well. The next morning we find one or more on their backs on the floor, stiff, combs white, and their feet in the air." It was the editor's busy day, so this is what the reader received: "Dear Sir: Your chickens are dead."

I Saw A Poem

Mabel Tuggle in the Danville (Va.) Commercial Appeal

I saw a poem yesterday—only they didn't know they were a poem. They were just a soldier and his girl—his wife, she said later when I talked to her.

I first met her eyes in the hideously garish mirror in the impersonal light of the railroad station.

She was little and blond with clear grey eyes. She had a bow of green ribbon in her yellow hair and she looked like a little girl about to cry as she carefully smoothed on her makeup.

"I have to hurry," she said, "or he will think I'm in here crying."

"Leaving on this train?" I asked.

"Yes, he is," she said "this is his last furlough."

"The train is late," I stated hopefully.

"This is one time I don't mind how late it is," she said and smiled.

She turned to go; she shut her eyes tightly to push the tears far out of sight and rearranged her lips into a little smile as she went out to where he was waiting, a smart figure in a private's uniform.

They sat on a bench in the waiting room, close together, their shoulders brushing each other, not saying anything.

She looked down at the new plain band on her third left finger. He reached over and touched it lightly and their eyes met.

In that look was all of life, its joy, ecstasy, its desperation and hope, mingled with the memory of all they had shared together.

Outside a taxi screamed to a stop, the traffic whirled through the streets, two women started in a loud conversation, people moved in and out like ants on important missions, a child cried loudly because he couldn't have some of his older sister's soft drink.

In all the world there were only these two in that look, there in a busy railroad station they sat as completely isolated from everything around them as if they had been under a palm tree in a limitless desert.

BREAD PUDDING

Bread pudding, that Saturday's child of the dessert repertoire, is no plebeian after all. Instead it is a true aristocrat, with a lineage as ancient as it is distinguished.

It seems our present-day bread pudding, studded with raisins and held together with a kind of custard filling, is descended from an antique feast-dish known as "white pot".

In England, back in druid days, springtime meant a special festival. And important to these rites was a ceremony in which everyone partook of white pot.

At first, before bake ovens were invented, "white pot" was a kind of clotted cream, or a sort of custard made of milk and honey. But later British farmers, who clung to this ancient springtime custom, enriched the recipe until it became buttered bread and raisins mixed with milk and eggs and sugar.

Just such a dish we give you here, streamlined to suit our modern methods, but still a traditional as "white pot". Serve it tonight and celebrate:

Raisin Bread Pudding

Pour
2 cups milk, scalded
over
2 cups dry bread broken into small pieces.

Let stand until bread is soft.
Add
1 egg, beaten
2 tablespoons sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup seedless raisins.

Pour into a greased baking dish and bake in a moderately slow oven (325 deg.F) for 45 minutes or until lightly

Cotton Taffeta

For taking the sun straight, the darling new princess dress of cotton taffeta is held in place by a button-on halter strap. When bare shoulders need covering, the bolero does the trick in a jiffy. This is one of the cotton sunbaths designed to take you from morn to dawn capably and smartly.

The Kitchen Front

YOU may not find it possible to serve chicken every Sunday—but when you do get one, be sure to make the most of it by using all of the left-overs. Add about 1/2-cup of cooked noodles to 1 cup of left-over diced chicken and broth, and combine with a can of corn. Place in a pan over medium gas flame and thicken mixture with crumbled salted crackers. Add 1 teaspoon butter or margarine, and serve.

A small amount of left-over chicken will make a delicious chicken salad. Combine small pieces of chicken with diced celery, add mayonnaise and salt and mix thoroughly. Serve on crisp lettuce.

A small quantity of pieces of left-over chicken and remaining broth or gravy added to fluffy white rice and seasoned to taste, makes a satisfying main dish.

Designer Prescribes Cottons For Young Growing Up Figures

A talented young designer named Emily Wilkens has turned a problem into an inspiration. The problem is that of growing figures and teen tastes, and Miss Wilkens has solved it by giving the twelve-to-fifteeners high-spirited clothes especially their own that are neither too young or too old.

Miss Wilkens, therefore, is an enthusiastic user of cottons because cottons are the youngest and freshest fabrics in the world; but she has other reason. Her most recent collection was entirely cotton because, she claims, cottons are ideal for clothes that are picturesque and practical, two qualities that characterize everything she creates. Then, too, she says, they're the solution to washing and ironing difficulties because they're so easy to launder that youngsters can do them up themselves.

The entire collection is marked by Miss Wilkens' defined gift for color and color combinations, and runs the gamut from bathing suits to a four-piece week end costume, all made of good cottons in pretty stripes, window-pane checks, and delicious, plain colors. However, her most revolutionary achievement, which also illustrates her complete understanding of young girls' desires, is her adaptation of black expressly for them. A modified dirndl version of the basic dress, it is accompanied by a jerkin of green and black gingham as cute as a wink, and may be dressed up with short black cotton gloves.

Miss Wilkens has borrowed some of disappears in a hurry in a household that feeds only four, that will be because the family couldn't resist coming back for more!

Liver Loaf
1 1/2 pounds liver
2 slices bacon
1 medium onion
2 eggs
1 teaspoon salt
3/4 teaspoon pepper
1/2 teaspoon marjoram
1 cup cracker crumbs
1 1/2 cups liquid
1/2 cup catsup

Cook liver slowly for five minutes in water to cover. Reserve liquid. Put liver through food chopper with bacon and onion. Add all other ingredients except the catsup. Liquid in which the liver was cooked, meat stock, milk, tomato or other vegetable juice may be used for moisture. Mix thoroughly. Pour the catsup into a well-greased loaf pan. Pack meat mixture over catsup. Bake in a moderate oven (350 deg.F.) for 1 hour.

string neck, and tiny eyelet wings forming sleeve caps.

It's natural to expect that a young woman with Emily Wilkens' special interest in young girls and their activities would do something special in the way of playclothes, and she has. Two dresses, dedicated to tennis players, are made of old-fashioned hard-wearing white cotton poplin with red and white trim. A glazed chintz outfit of bra, shorts and skirt in creamy white with a band of pink chintz at the skirt box pleating to give the shorts plenty of fullness belongs in this group, as does a pinafore playsuit in black and white window pane checks with suspenders of solid black, designed with an eye to teen-age activity.

A Hollywood vacation was what transformed Emily Wilkens, fashion artist, into Emily Wilkens, fashion designer for young people. She created personalized wardrobes for child stars and the children of stars, and from this start decided to devote her time and talents to designing proper clothes for the fashion-neglected youngsters who felt too grown-up for the Girls' Department and whose mothers thought they were still too young for the Junior Miss.

Cookery Hint

If a favorite recipe calls for tomato sauce and there isn't any in the pantry, use brown gravy instead. It will give the dish a pleasing new flavor.

War Needs Create Shortage

American consumers have accepted the shortages of electric irons, toasters, and certain foods as part of the sacrifice the nation must make to win the war. They have also learned to accept the utter lack of silk and nylon products, especially hosiery. What they have frequently overlooked is that the cotton industry has made and is making a gigantic contribution to the war effort, a contribution on a par with the steel, ship-building, aircraft and ordnance industries, says the Cotton-Textile Institute.

Once the staggering demands for the final, all-out assaults on Germany and Japan are met, the industry will again be ready to turn its great productive skill to the manufacture of the articles that will be needed in the building up the bright new post-war world.

Out of its strenuous efforts to meet the emergencies of war will flow a host of new products that will reflect the dramatic technological advances forced by the stress of war. The industry only asks that consumers be patient, that they buy only what they need and conserve what they have until victory is in sight.

Explaining the shortages that have developed in some goods, the Institute points out that the demand of the military services for cotton products is tremendous. The Army alone requires 11,000 separate cotton products. They range from shoe laces to the tires of fling fortresses, from white fabric for Arctic wear to insect nets for the tropics, from fuel hoses and self-sealing gas tanks to sterilized surgical dressing for the wounded. In the electric power and communications system of super-dreadnaughts, 436,000 yards of cotton cloth are used. Over 200 yards are used in plastic parts of new bombers.

Pan fry the first five ingredients in shortening about 10 minutes. Add tomatoes, water and seasoning and cook over low heat until vegetables are tender. Turn into a two and one-half quart casserole and top with biscuit dough. Place in oven and bake at 450 deg. 20 minutes.

With industry employing ten million more workers, sales of work clothing have expanded to record breaking—filters, machinery and fan belts, tim-proportions. Industrial cotton fabrics ing gears, tire cords, wire and cable insulations, all kinds of tapes, heavy filter cloths used in the petroleum, paint chemical and food industries are selling in the largest volume ever recorded. The sharp rise in the birth rate has complicated the task of the industry by doubling the call for diapers, bed sheets pants and the many cotton items in lavatories.

In the cotton industry there has been no expansion in productive capacity resulting from establishment of government financed facilities. Ever since long before Pearl Harbor, the industry has been going ahead on its own steam. To complicate matters still further, mills were not allowed to invest

Off To School They Go In Cottons Smart As Mother's

There's as much style in little girls' clothes for school and play nowadays as in big sister's and mother's clothes, and pert young garments with the same casual yet pretty look found in the best grown-up fashions are first choice with both the younger generation and their mamas, says the fashion director of the Cotton Textile Institute and National Cotton Council. Over-trimmed, gingerbread styles are as dead as the dodo.

Most of these neat young clothes are made of cotton fabrics which have proved as practical as they are pretty from season to season and year to year. In spite of cotton shortages, there's a wide variety of fabrics—gingham, pique, broadcloth, sport denim and print cloths have been allocated the children's wear—to mother's and children's delight.

Kindergarten and Nursery School
One of the important style trends in tiny dresses is the simulated jumper dress usually in plaid or checked gingham with white pique sleeves and dick-eey effect attached to the body of the dress, or of plain or striped chambray with a white blouse effect.

The most popular silhouette for little sisters has a gathered, semi-dirndl skirt, simple back-buttoned bodice, and square or round neck, although the nautical dressing washable cottons and the princess dress have many admirers. There's an international flavor to tots' clothes today, with Chinese themes—for instance, like one cham-bray dress with a standing collar and braid trim down one side and across the pocket. There are Oriental colors, money in new facilities. With iron and steel scarce and machinery manufacturers forced to turn out ordnance, it has been most difficult for the industry to replace worn-out equipment and obtain parts. In 1944 there were actually 2,681,000 less spindles than in 1939 due to the junking of worn-out machinery.

With no equipment available, the industry was forced to get the maximum production out of what machinery it had on hand and did so by hiring thousands of additional workers and operating multiple shifts. In 1939 there were 394,000 workers in the mills. By 1942 the wage rolls had risen to 503,000. In 1939 the average spindle operated 4,149 hours over the entire year. In 1942 the average spindle was working 5,794 hours, an increase of 40 percent.

This hiring of workers and intensive utilization of equipment combined to expand production to levels previously regarded as unattainable by government officials, economists and even management and labor. In 1939 the industry processed 7 1-3 million bales of cotton and turned out more than nine billion square yards of cloth. In 1942 mills processed almost 11 1/2 million bales of cotton (5,750,000,000 pounds) and produced about 12 and one-half billion square yards of cloth.

Afflicted with war-born forces beyond its control, the industry has been unable to hold production at the peak levels reached in 1942. The draft has taken more than 100,000 of its workers. Thousands of its most skilled workers have been lost to the war emergency—shipyards, aircraft factories, munitions plants and the like. As one of the largest employers of labor among manufacturing industries, cotton textile mills constituted a reservoir from which war industries managed to siphon off large numbers of highly desirable operatives. As a consequence of these developments, employment fell from 503,000 in 1942 to 455,000 in March, 1944. These experienced workers were replaced by men and women who had to be given expensive training but even so production per man-hour has gone into a noticeable decline.

Since cotton is second only to steel as the most vital war material, the industry was among the first on which wartime controls have been imposed by the War Production Board. Through directives, priorities, and allocations, cotton-textile mills are told what to make and to which industries their output may be sold.

Jumpers, pinafores, and suits are at the head of the class with the primary school and younger junior high crowds. Scalloped white insets down the blouse front of a border print with the border used on either side of the blouse and on the pockets is an illustration of the simulated jumper. Navy plaid with a white collar and gilet in big and little sister sizes is another.

Checked ginghams with simulated boleros outlined with contrasting binding in big and little sister versions show how one-piece dresses often suggest suits. Striped chambray with rick-rack edged suspender straps and rick-rack on the shirt yoke is another suit type. Bright corduroy skirts with contrasting pique blouses are also favorites with the pigtail girls, and peasant embroideries used on vests and in stripes on blouse or skirt.

School fashions cannot be mentioned without a glance at the important new size range for girls going through the transition between little girl and Teen. "Teenette," etc., the styles have the sophistication of regular teens, but are proportioned to fit smaller-than-
